COUNCILMEN DISCUSS PAVING, HEAR PETITIONS FOR SEWERS

Residents Near Fairground Ask Relief from Insanitary Conditions—Tenth-st and Hay-pl Paving Projects Are Discussed—Dolan Speaks on Renewal of Light and Power Contract Next June—Pump Repairs Asked

A petition bearing 119 signatures of residents of Fair-st, Lynn-st, John-st, Denman-av, Wilson-av, and Kenilworth-av asking for a sewer in that section of the city was presented to the city council at their regular meeting Monday evening by Councilman R. M. Eckles.

C. Hosier Durand in speaking of the petition said that during the summer months, because of the absence of a sewer, conditions in that section of the city become almost intolerable. He said that nearly every property owner on the streets mentioned signed the petition and are willing to stand a large slice of the cost of putting in a sewer.

President E. S. Gaumer called attention to the fact that this section has been surveyed and was found to be too low for the main sewer line: and because of this fact, it was pointed out, the building of a sewer would necessitate the installation of a sewage disposal plant south of the city.

The matter was referred to the street committee who will probably report at the next meeting.

CELLARS FLOODED

No temporary relief for the residents of Kenilworth-av who are bothered with flooded cellars is in sight. The street committee reported that the only remedy would be to put in a storm sewer. Service Director Fred Ashman said that the water entering the cellars does not come from the surface but soaks thru from underneath. "Only two houses in that vicinity are bothered," he said.

President Gaumer suggested that the people in that vicinity present a petition, the cost of effecting any relief to be covered by assessing the property benefited. For the present time the matter was dismissed

PAVING PROJECT

The street committee further reported that the residents of Hay-pl are as yet undecided as to whether to pave that street with reinforced concrete or brick.

The committee also reported in favor of the Tenth-st paving project and recommended that the proper legislation be started at once. The city solicitor was ordered to prepare, for the next regular meeting, a resolution to proceed to pave.

PUMP REPAIRS

Owen Popham, chief engineer at the city water works, at the meeting Monday night reported that the plungers in the pump at the water works are badly worn and should be replaced with new ones. He recommended that chilled metal plungers be purchased. An ordinance authrizing the service director to purchase the necessary equipment, the cost not to exceed $2500, was passed by council.

POWER CONTRACT

Jack Dolan, manager of the local plant of the Ohio Service Company, briefly addressed the council Monday evening concerning the contract between the city and the local power company, which expires in June of this year. Mr. Dolan stated that he had hoped to have figures relative to the renewal of the contract ready to

HAINES CAUGHT AT ZANESVILLE

Fugitive Sought at Father's Home Here After Spectacular Escape

Edward L. Haines, aged 27, said to have formerly lived in Warsaw vicinity, who last Saturday afternoon escaped from Deputy U. S. Marshal W. H. Lessner by leaping from a fast-moving Baltimore & Ohio passenger train near Cambridge, was captured by Zanesville police Monday afternoon in the home of C. E. Jenkins, on Highland-av, Zanesville.

Haines was being transferred from Los Angeles, California, to the Moundsville, West Virginia, penitentiary, when he escaped.

He was recently indicted by a Wheeling grand jury on a charge of conspiracy in connection with "liquor running."

Haines father, it is said, lives on the Schriver farm, near Warsaw. Marshall Lessner notified local officials Sunday morning to be on the lookout as it was believed he might go to the home of his father.

CHESTNUT-ST P. T. A. HAS ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING MONDAY

Around 75 parents attended the regular meeting of the Chestnut Parent-Teachers Association held at the Chestnut school building, Monday evening. Children in the room of Miss McIntyre had the greatest number of parents present.

During the business session Miss Kate McClure, Mrs. Ben Hardy and R. E. Tracewell were appointed on a committee for the nomination of officers for the coming year.

The advisability of having a city-wide Schick test for the detection of diphtheria susceptibility of the school children of Coshocton was also discussed and a committee composed of L. M. Anderson, G. L. Wells and M. D. Custer was appointed to confer with a committee of the Federated Parent-Teachers Association of the city relative to the matter. The Sycamore Association has endorsed the proposition.

In the literary program of the evening, Miss Thyra Wells and Miss Kate McClure, the negative debaters on the question "Resolved That the School Has More to Do With the Moral Training of the Child Than the Home," defeated the affirmative contenders, George D. Klein and Kathryn Schanbacher.

Eugene Gorsline capably rendered a violin solo and responded to an encore. Miss Mary Louise Ferguson's rendition of Brahn's Lullaby was particularly well taken.

Following the program refreshments were served by the mothers of the third and fourth grade pupils.

SUNDAY AUTO RIDES, OPERATION OF RADIO, PARTIES ARE BANNED

JERSEY CITY, N. J., March 11—Twentieth century New Jersey today faced a return to all but the stocks and pillory of 1798.

Edward H. Ransom, Jr., president of the Sunday League of New Jersey, announced he would appear before the city commission this afternoon and demand that—

1—All automobile traffic be suspended on Sunday.

2—The playing of phonographs, radio receiving and broadcasting and the holding of parties be declared illegal.

Ransom said he would act under the statute passed in 1798 and never repealed.

Ransom was largely responsible for the order calling upon police to get evidence against persons and business houses who violated the Sabbath laws.

Twenty thousand violations were found in the county. Names of these were given to the grand jury today. Wholesale indictments are expected.

Many persons were openly hostile to the "blue law crusade." Others laughed.

But Police Chief Richard B. Battersby, of Jersey City declared the affair was no joke.

"Wait until next Sunday and see," he said, explaining that if Ransom's plea to the grand jury was effective police would report every motorist, radio and phonograph user, every boy or girl playing at games and all persons attending parties.

80 BODIES TAKEN FROM UTAH MINE

Widows and Children of Miners Number 868; Plan Relief for Relatives

BULLETIN

CASTLE GATE, Utah, March 11—This afternoon 80 bodies had been removed from the mine.

Government mine rescue officials had finished exploring the main tunnel at this hour and found no signs of life, ending all hope that any of the victims would be taken out alive.

CASTLE GATE, Utah, March 11—Rescue workers had penetrated the entire depth of the main tunnel and 80 blackened and burned bodies had been removed today from Mine Number 2, of the Utah Fuel Co., where a series of blasts Saturday imprisoned 171 coal miners.

Sixty-one of the recovered bodies have been identified.

Rescue workers, toiling thruout the night under electric lights strung along the passage-way removed bodies singly and in groups of two and three on great long stretchers. With the main tunnel virtually cleared of the scarred and burned victims, it was believed that the bodies to be found in the inner chambers will be less mutilated.

As the work of rescue proceeded those who held out a flickering hope of life still remaining in the great tomb were forced to admit the chances were practically nil.

COOLIDGE SENDS SPECIAL TAX MESS'GE TO CONGRESS TODAY

Asks Immediate Passage of Special Resolution for 25 Per Cent Cut in Federal Income Tax—Action Sure to Meet Opposition of Coalition of Democrats and Insurgent Republicans

WASHINGTON, March 11—President Coolidge today sent a special message to the 68th congress, urging that it enact at once a separate resolution which will provide a reduction of 25 per cent in federal income taxes applying to 1923 incomes.

The transmission of the special message today followed speedily upon the action of Republican leaders in congress yesterday in turning down this self-same resolution The contended, that inasmuch as the 25 per cent reduction was contained in the general tax bill there was no occasion for passing a special resolution at this time.

Democrats an dinsurgent republicans are also opposed to it, fearing that it will pave the way for President Coolidge to veto the general tax bill, once the 25 per cent is made to apply to current taxes.

The text of the president's message follows:

"It has been my earnest hope that a 25 percentum reduction in taxes to be paid for the current year may be provided by law before the 15th of March current. Many people have been expecting that such would be the case and deferred their tax returns accordingly. It is a matter of such immediate importance that I have no hesitation in recommending that the public welfare would be much advanced by temporarily laying aside all other legislation and enacting a resolution for this purpose which ought to be by unanimous consent. The taxpayers, the business interests, agriculture, industry, finance, in fact all the elements that go to make up the economic welfare of the people of America would be greatly benefited by such action. It would remove an element of uncertainty from the current financial year at once, which would be a strong stimulant to business with its resultant benefits to the wage earners and the agriculture of the country. It is impossible to see that any harm could accrue from this action, and there is every prospect of resulting benefits which would be very great. It would be a positive step in the right direction, which is much needed at this time to justify the confidence of the people that the government is intent solely on the promotion of the public welfare without regard to any collateral objects."

Mr. Pence outlined a plan which he said he wished sometime to see tried out in the schools. He believes that pupils of the mature age should be required to attend school eight hours a day, about two hours longer than the present length of a school day, and should not be compelled to study at night.

George Mitchell, who recently returned from a month's trip to Cuba and the Panama Canal zone, spoke giving an interesting account of his trip.

RESCUE CREWS

The absence of bodies in the main passageway offered some vague hope that a few of the men might have retreated to distant passages and barricaded themselves. Expert rescue workers, however, held out little encouragement to the mourners that any man in the mine was alive after the terrific blasts and the penetrating death vapors that followed.

The explosions destroyed concrete bulkheads, crumpled up heavy steel doors and splintered hugh timbers, according to the rescue teams, and it was apparent that all the victims whose bodies have thus far been removed died instantly from the force of the blast.

Every canary bird in Canon co has been rounded up to aid the helmeted rescue workers in their efforts to reach the imprisoned miners. Men advancing into the entries off the main passage carried a cage containing a canary, the bird giving first evidence of the presence of poisonous gases.

ESTABLISH DEADLINES

Thousands of people poured into the sorrowing little mining town over Sunday making it necessary to establish deadlines approximately a mile back from the scene of the disastrous explosion

This action made it possible for rescue workers and volunteers to pursue the work unhampered by the morbid and curious onlookers.

Hundreds of sorrowing widows and orphaned children remained as close to the mine mouth as possible, waiting for bodies to be brot from the death shaft.

Mine company officials this morning declined to make an official statement on the probable cause of the explosion but the general opinion continued to prevail that it was caused by an accumulation of dust.

Offers of assistance to the stricken town were received from all sections of the state, as well as from points outside.

Gov Charles R. Maby is on the ground preparing to provide immediate relief if required by the families of the stricken miners. Western headquarters of American Red Cross at San Francisco has also issued orders to furnish relief thru the Utah organization.

Agricultural Relief in a Jam—Farmers' Organizations and Millers Attack McNary Bill

WASHINGTON, March 10—Legislation to relieve the economic distress of agriculture which to the west at least is of paramount importance and may vitally affect the political battle of 1924, has gotten into a clumsy jam.

The so-called farm bloc in congress is at sixes and sevens. All sorts of measures intended, of course sincerely to be helpful are on the calender but the outlook at present is that no one of them will command a majority and unless the champions of the farmer put their heads together there is danger that nothing of value will be accomplished.

In the last few days opposition has crystallized against the McNary-Haugen bill The protests are coming not only from the farmers co-operative organizations but from milling interests A body blow was delivered at the bill by Representative Sydney Anderson, of Minnesota, one of the most ardent supporters of the farmer's interest in congress and a man who has the confidence of the so called radicals.

Mr Anderson says the proposed measure is "unworkable and impracticable" and that the farmer "will be the greatest sufferer from its imposition should it become law" The McNary-Haugen bill is a complicated affair which even Mr Anderson admits is plausible. It provides that the price of one or more of certain specified farm products, namely wheat, flour, corn, raw cotton, wool, cattle, sheep and swine or any of their food products, be maintained by government action at a price level corresponding to the price level of all commodities.

Thus the government would set up an establishment with a capital of $200,000,000 and would handle the export crop applying an excise tax of say one cent a bushel on the domestic production and applying approximately four cents a bushel from that accumulation to offset losses on export transactions

While various farm products are included within the jurisdiction of the measure, Mr. Anderson thinks the bill has no real application except to wheat. He believes a ratio of prices cannot be maintained because it is necessary that if farm prices go up that other prices go down.

The milling interests are complaining that the bill would interfere with their business and there are others who think the ordinary laws of supply and demand had better be left alone.

What the proponents of the McNary-Haugen bill will argue, however is that the farmers' export could be best handled by the government and that the operation would tend to fix the domestic price of wheat at a higher level.

Meanwhile President Coolidge has proclaimed a higher tariff on wheat in the hope that this will cause the domestic price to rise. The farmers have been complaining that the Fordney-McCumber law has been hitting them both ways not only has it been ineffective in keeping out foreign wheat but with reduced earnings the farmer has had to pay higher prices for the articles he has to [illegible] things which on account of tariff protection have advanced in price Should the new tariff rates fail to keep out competitive wheat the farmer will go off the reservation politically this year that much seems assured so the administration is hoping the latest [illegible] upward of the tariff will [illegible] in line.

[illegible] the Norbeck bill has [illegible] was in the senate It [illegible] to appropriate $[illegible] to [illegible] to farmers in [illegible] $[illegible] so that [illegible] and cows may be purchased [illegible] and the wheat farmer on [illegible]

INTERESTING DATA OBTAINED ON HOME LIFE BY MINISTER

Coshocton people want a home with a garden and a lawn where children may play.

This according to the Rev. Orllas G. White, pastor of the Church of Christ, was the unanimous voice of those who answered the questionnaire on home life sent out by him last week, and which formed the basis for his discussion on "The Ideal Home," at Sunday evening's service

"The ideal family," said Rev. White, "surrenders individual interests and keeps together. Good amusements for the home include those things which enrich the mind — music, books, innocent games and neighborly visits. 'Good times' are artificial and depend upon excitement and gratification. while happiness is the result of enriching the mind."

The services of the church were voted first place by all, according to Rev. White, and the most interest and difference centered in the club and lodge. Opinions varied from considering these social institutions education—in bringing people together and affording a broader knowledge of life—to their utter condemnation. Many held that the clubs and lodges do what the church should do, and gave no credit to the church as a socializing influence. Others argued, however that clubs and lodges take people away from their homes and supplant the clarifying influence of both home and church.

Much interest is being manifested in this series of sermons on home life. Next Sunday evening the subject of the sermon will be "The Ideal Young Man." The following questions are being answered by the young women of the city—

1. Name the qualities or characteristics you want your ideal to possess.

2. Should he be an athlete and, if so, are there any games he should avoid?

3 What would you ask of him in extent of education?

4 Should a young man gamble? Is Mah Jong gambling?

5. Should the ideal young man use tobacco, cigarettes, cigars or pipe?

6. Would you want him to be an active Christian and what services should he attend?

7. Should he help with the house work? Would you expect to help him earn the money?

AMERICAN OLYMPIC TEAM FACES HARD CONTESTS ABROAD

By DAVIS J. WALSH.

NEW YORK, March 10.—Storm signals are flying off the coast of France against the coming of the American Olympic track and field team, according to a friendly tip passed along today for what it might be worth by Harry Kaskey, Chicago speed skater and member of the Oympic winter sports. The latter, who met a more or less unanimous defeat at Chamonix and Kaskey intimated that the legacy might very well prove a most welcome burden for the remaining American teams at the Paris games.

Finland, he said, is stronger in track and field than early reports would seem to indicate.

"According to what was told me abroad, both Finland and Sweden have developed in the last year young athletes almost as capable as the stars. Finland alone has what it considers a team capable of winning any Olympiad and you don't want to forget that the Finns are off to a long lead as a result of the winter sports competition. Considering the distance our men must travel and the lack of time for adequate preparation on the other side, I wouldn't want to bet too much money on the chances of an American victory."

Speaking of betting, Kaskey added that Europeans, even the Finns, were not disposed when discussing Olympic possibilities to say it with currency.

The feeling against another American victory was none too enthusiastic, he added.

"The track and field team and the swimmers should be given six weeks abroad before the start of the games." Kaskey declared. "Our skaters should have had two months because of the early start of the winter sports and the great difference between American and continental speed skating.

"The best proof of the time needed for conditioning in a foreign land is found in the refusal of the Finn who won the Olympic individual title to come here for our championships unless he was given six weeks of preparation here. At that he was in perfect condition when the offer was made"

WHAT CAUSES TROUBLE WITH AUDIO AMPLIFIER TOLD

Wrong Connections and Low Batteries Most Frequent Cause of Trouble

By Carlton E. Butler
Radio Engineer

As with the case of all new circuits there are a number of our readers who are unable to get results. The most frequent complaint is that the volume of the first stage of audio is only equal, or even less, than the volume from the detector tube alone.

There are a number of causes of trouble with the first audio frequency stage. I will enumerate a few of the causes and the remedy for the trouble.

If you find that the volume of the first stage is only equal or less than the detector tube alone it may be due to a low filament battery. You first tune in the station alone and then turn up the amplifier rheostat and plug into the second stage. The additional strain of the second tube on the low battery will cause the voltage to drop to a point where the detector is no longer operating at its best.

A good test to see if this is true or not is to light up both tubes at once and tune in the station with the telephone plug in the detector jack. Now plug into the second jack and note if the signals aren't noticeably louder.

If the volume of the first stage is still lower than the detector alone we must look elsewhere for trouble. Have you added another B battery to your detector B battery so that the combined voltage will be sufficient to properly operate the amplifier tube?

Or you may be using too much B battery. Many tubes operate at their best, if a C battery is not used, with 45 to 65 volts of B battery. The use of a higher voltage battery may cause your tubes to choke up. Try reducing the battery voltage to 45 volts.

Perhaps the greatest reason for poor or no amplification is due to wrong connections. On the secondary of the transformer there are two binding posts, one marked "Grid," and one marked "Neg. Fil." If the "Neg. Fil" post is connected to the positive lead of the filament battery the tube will receive a positive bias on the grid and little or no amplification will result.

TAXI DRIVERS FAIL TO CARRY INSURANCE REQUIRED BY CITY

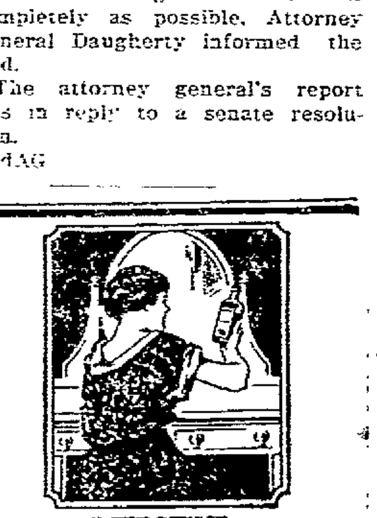

LIMA, March 11—Taxicab operators, balking at provisions of the new cab ordinance which requires liability insurance for passengers ranging from $1,000 to $10,000 for each cab, will be barred from Lima streets if they do not qualify by Thursday. This was the edict of city manager C. A. Bingham Monday night.

The measure requiring insurance was passed March 3, but the taxi owners thus far have made no move to comply with the liability clause. They have threatened a legal fight to prevent the city placing the ordinance in effect.

MANAGERS CLAIM 200 DELEGATES IN COOLIDGE'S RANKS

BY GEORGE R. HOLMES

WASHINGTON D. C., March 11—While public attention has been centered upon the thousand and one "sensations" incident to the naval oil investigation, the campaign managers of Calvin Coolidge have been working with a quiet efficiency that has resulted to date in the acquisition of nearly 200 delegates to the Cleveland convention in advance of the primary battles.

Three months from today the Republicans meet at Cleveland to nominate and the Coolidge managers are so confident as a result of their preliminary work and surveys that they have informed the president it will be "simply a ratification meeting."

Up to today, six states have instructed their delegates for Coolidge—Virginia, Kentucky, Iowa, South Carolina, Louisiana, and Minnesota. By the end of this week four more states will have joined this list, the Coolidge managers claimed today. These are New Hampshire, Kansas, Colorado and Mississippi. The grand total of delegates strength from these ten states is 184.

MINE LEADERS SAY COAL INDUSTRY IS FACING BIG CRISIS

BELLAIRE, March 11- That the coal industry faces a return to days of "cut-throat" competition, such as prevailed prior to the World war is the assertion made here today by Frank Ledvinka, president of the Eastern Ohio subdistrict, United Mine Workers, addressing the several hundred delegates attending the annual convention of the sub-district which opened this morning. The delegates represent approximately 18,000 coal miners.

President Ledvinka pictured economic ruin for many coal companies in the union fields and intimated that many thousands of miners would be thrown out of employment as a result. This is indicated, he said, by "the fact that the railroads have adequate car supply to care for all the normal fuel tonnage the country can use.

"Hundreds of mines will close down permanently in the union fields, investments will be lost to operators and the opportunity to work will be lost to thousands of mine workers," said Ledvinka, discussing probable developments.

PLAN LEGALITY TEST ON CRABBE RULING OUTLAWING DEPUTIES

COLUMBUS, March 11 — Court test of Attorney General Crabbe's ruling outlawing "card" deputies in the state prohibition department may be instituted soon, it was indicated today in statehouse circles.

In an attempt to re-establish the system declared by Crabbe as illegal, attorneys, co-operating with the Ohio Anti-Saloon League, plan to bring a test suit, but the exact manner in which the question will be raised has not been made known.

CROOKED GAME, VICTIM CHARGES

CLEVELAND, March 11—A tip from a man said to have lost $500 in a card game caused the arraignment of four men in police court today on gambling charges. The man said he believed marked cards were being used.

M'LEAN TO BE EXAMINED BY COMMITTEE TOMORROW

BY KENNETH CLARK

WASHINGTON, March 11—The far flung activities of E. B. McLean and his associates in connection with the oil scandal were under fire again today before the senate public lands committee.

Winding up its work of examining some of the baffling code messages preparatory to calling McLean himself tomorrow, the committee summoned John F. Major, the publisher's confidential agent, and the leader in the moves behind the scenes to prevent McLean's appearance upon the stand.

The committee desired particularly to question Major about the secret meeting of McLean and ex-Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall in Atlantic City last December when, according to evidence before the investigators, the story of the famous $100,000 loan was "framed."

Major went to Atlantic City but did not attend the conference, he said.

What transpired at the seaside meeting is regarded by members of the committee as tremendously important in drawing tighter the web of evidence that has been spun around Fall and his associates in the oil scandal.

The two white house attaches, E. W. Starling, of the secret service force, and E. W. Smithers, telegrapher who have been under subpoena for more than ten days, also were ready to testify.

Some interesting developments were expected when the committee examined today a new batch of the McLean-Fall telegrams. Most of the messages were from Three Rivers, N. M., where Fall's ranch is located.

The oil scandal investigation will be concluded within two or three weeks under the program mapped out today by Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Montana.

My Experience is that
SYRUP PEPSIN
Is just what you need

This Will Make Digestion Easy

WHAT the dyspeptic needs is not soda and charcoal and breath perfumes but a medicine that will help his bowels to move regularly, for dyspepsia and constipation are allied. If you will take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin systematically as the directions on the package call for you will soon digest your food properly and pass it out normally, and heartburn, belching, dizziness, nervousness and bloating will vanish. In time you can dispense with all medicines as Syrup Pepsin will have exercised the intestinal and stomach muscles so they act for themselves. Mr. Lewis F. Schultz of Reasnor, Ia., Mrs. Victor Knodle of 3625 Bank St., Louisville, Ky., and hosts of others will verify this.

World Acclaims Success

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the prescription of a well-known physician of that name who practised successfully for 47 years. It has been on the market thirty years and is today the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. Thousands of families have it in their medicine chest ready when any member shows signs of dyspepsia, constipation, torpid liver, sour stomach, biliousness, coated tongue, offensive breath, headaches and such ailments that indicate deranged stomach and bowels. Many serious diseases are prevented by this timely aid.

Formula Plainly Stated

Have no hesitancy giving Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin to anyone young or old. It is a mild, gentle laxative free from narcotics. It will not cramp or gripe. The formula is on the package, a compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and simple aromatics. A bottle can be had at any drug store and averages less than a cent a dose. Economical for families and fully guaranteed. You will find it a great improvement in taste and action over castor oil, or "candy cathartics" made from coal-tar that cause skin diseases, calomel that loosens the teeth, salts in water or powder that concentrate the blood and dry the skin.

McAdoo Candidacy Has More Lives Than Cat—Underwood Gaining Strength in South

WASHINGTON, March 11—Altho the McAdoo boom for the presidency has been theoretically killed off at least nine times, like the life of the feline it keeps on going and the real test of what public opinion is will com in three presidential primaries this month Georgia, South Dakota, and North Dakota.

The primary in Alabama on Tuesday of this week has been expected to produce an endorsement for Senator Underwood whose opponent L. B. Musgrove is friendly to McAdoo but the former secretary of the treasury has formally denied that he is the inspiration of the Musgrove campaign or its ultimate beneficiary.

Senator Underwood's strength in the south is increasing. He has the confidence of the conservative elements and has been courageous enough to denounce th Ku Klux Klan which in itslf is no trival thing to do in the hot bed of Ku Kluxism.

The North Dakota primaries are to be held on March 18 and the Georgia primaries on the following day. The supporters of McAdoo have staked all on the result. They wish to prove that the oil disclousures have had no effect on McAdoo's prestige and that if he can carry a southern state in which Senator Underwood is entered and if he can win a western state like North Dakota where presumably the opposition to a corporation lawyer would crystalize as soon as anywhere else in America, the McAdoo campaign will have survived the recent attacks upon it.

McAdoo aready has the endorsement of the county proposal convention in South Dakota whose primaries will be held on March 25, but there is an uninstructed slate running against him. In Georgia McAdoo is counting upon the old Wilsonian elements. In North Dakota there is a bitter factional fight but while there are two slates of delegates all are committed to McAdoo.

The New Hampshire primaries will be held tomorrow but there is not expected to develop any real test of sentiment with respect to Democratic candidates.

The recent primary in Missouri in which Senator Reed failed to carry his own state is construed by the McAdoo men as a triumph for while they could not win the state themselves they did succeed in blocking the endorsement of the way they hold responsible for the recent attack on McAdoo. It was Senator Reed who when E. L. Doheny was called to the witness stand asked the questions which brot on the controversy over the eligibility of a candidate who had accepted large fees from corporations for legal services.

Some of the most important men in the McAdoo boom will admit their uncertainty over the outcome in June but they feel it their duty to give McAdoo his run in the primaries and if the people approve of him and his strength grows between now and the time of the Democratic national convention these backers will continue their support. If on the other hand, McAdoo fails to go to the controversy with a controlling number of delegates, the chances are the McAdoo supporters will keep together for the purpose of throwing their strength to the man they want nominated in pace of McAdoo. There is one thing certain at this writing—the forces behind McAdoo are very likely to control the next Democratic national convention and select the standard bearer of the party.

40 YEARS IN COSHOCTON

YEAR," Which Will Appear at the Sixth St. Theatre, Friday. Scene from John Golden's Greatest Comedy Success, "THE FIRST March 21st.

IRWIN C. MILLER, with "LIZA," the Big Colored Musical Comedy, Which Comes to the Sixth St. Theater, Tuesday, March 11th.

Sixth St. Theatre JOURNAL

"Liza," which opened a week's engagement at the Lyceum last night, is a trifle slow in getting started, but once going, it develops into one of the best of the present crop of musical extravaganzas written, staged and acted by colored people. "Liza," hasn't the class of "Shuffle Along," but on the other hand is far and away better than "Plantation Days," which scored an immense hit at the Lyceum during the early part of the season.

The book is by Irvin C. Miller, a lean, amiable comedian who contributes no little to the general enjoyment of the evening. What plot there is concerns the usual collection for a worthy cause and the attempt of several colored gentlemen who abhor work to collect the collection. But the plot matters little except that it leads to one of the really uproariously funny scenes of the year, the graveyard scene, from which Miller and Billy Mills extract enough humor to last through several evenings. Doe Doe Green also manages to carry a lot of the fun.

"Liza" has at least three distinct song hits, "Liza," "Planning" and "Dandy." "My Old Man" and "Second Fiddle," both introduced by Billy Mills, also went over well. There are several jazz babies, the most attractive being Ethel Ridley, a real "blues" singer, and Aurora Greely, in the title role. A good-looking, well-dressed and well-trained chorus helped considerably, as did the director, drummer and four or five clever dancers, most of them unprogrammed.

In our opinion, and evidently in the opinion of a large and enthusiastic audience, "Liza" is well worth seeing, if you like that type of show.—Ohio State Journal.

CITIZEN

"Liza," the all-colored musical comedy, which opened at the Lyceum Sunday night, is in the class with "Plantation Days" and "Shuffle Along," two other tip-top all-colored shows. In many ways it surpasses "Plantation Days" and in several ways equals "Shuffle Along."

The comedy in "Liza" is better and cleaner than in the former show and it has one important entertaining calorie that the later production hasn't—a good "blues" singer. She is Ethel Ridley. Aurora Greely, as the ingenuine, is a likable, pretty brown-skin with a nice voice.

Doe Doe Green, with his ridiculous walk and "jives," is billed as leading comedian, but Irvin Miller and Billy Mills provide 75 per cent of the fun during the performance.

The song numbers in "Liza" are good and the chorus hard-working and fast-stepping. There's no side-stepping. Colored folk are entertainers.—Columbus Citizen.

TODAY'S BRIGHT SPOT

The Oberlin College faculty club cook, colored, took a trip to Xenia recently on an urgent call. At Springfield she boarded an interurban headed for Xenia. She took the only available seat. All others in the car were men.

She continued the journey with not a few misgivings. On arriving at Xenia she discovered that she had ridden in a special car chartered by the Ku Klux Klan.

LOGAN, March 11—The monthly coal bill of the waterworks plant of the city of Logan is now between $600 and $800, according to the demand for water. Council is considering the drilling of a test well to try for gas and thus save thousands of dollars yearly.

OBERLIN, March 11—Theodore Forbes, Oberlin college senior, is selected as the 1924-25 representative to Shansi, China. The Shansi address was given by Franklin M. Warner, '98, a member of the Prudential Committee of the American Board of New York.

DEFIANCE, March 11—Since there is no welfare society in Defiance and many needy persons are appealing fro aid, Mayor Edwin A. Latty and Police Chief Karl A. Weaner have provided a charity fund by requesting public donations. Food, clothes and money were realized. Chief Weaner spends his evenings and any spare time distributing to the poor and needy.

LIMA, March 11—A clock, striking five, saved Deputy Sheriff Samuel Osbun and his wife from possible asphyxiation. The clock awoke Mrs. Osbun and she detected the fumes from a stove on which a door came open. She aroused her husband, but he collapsed before reaching the stove. After doors and windows were opened, the Osbuns revived.

WOODSFIELD, March 11—Cooperative selling of oil in order to bring about better prices will be discussed at a meeting of the Monroe county oil owners here tomorrow. The producers point out that Western crude is commanding a better price than the high-grade Pennsylvania oil produced in this part of Eastern Ohio. Pooling of the production and sale in large quantities will be suggested. The plan, similar to the wool and tobacco industries, is revolutionary so far as the oil industry is concerned.

BUCYRUS, March 11—The grand jury of Crawford county has convened but has only one case before it. It is that of George Solinas, murdered by Harry Z. Xanthoules, Feb. 22.

NEWARK, March 11—U. Grant Gregory, who operates a line of busses in this city, tried to do a little bus-bootlegging and came to grief. Bus-bootlegging, be it known, is operating a motor bus over a route for which a license has not been granted. Gregory has a license to operate busses in Newark, but the state utilities commission granted him none for inter-city traffic, however. He took 25 members of the American Yoeman to Columbus. All went well until he reached Pataskala on the return trip, when, blinded by the bright lights of an approaching auto, his bus was ditched. It upset, but none of the occupants was hurt.

BUCYRUS, March 11—Crocuses are blooming in some of the well kept gardens here, earlier than in two years past.

ATHENS, March 11—The city council has decided to employ a regular engineer to take charge of the municipal work and especially to get the city plants into permanent shape. For some years the only city records of water and sewer lines have been carried in the heads of two veteran employes and if they quit or die the city will be unable to find any mains.

NELSONVILLE, March 11—Funeral services for William Allman, 75, civil war veteran, were attended largely by his own relatives. His widow, seven children, 31 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren were there besides many friends.

MIDDLEPORT, March 11—With a score of other wells around, drilled to a 1700-foot depth, the first to fail to produce gas or oil in this region was drilled in the Nease Settlement Field. Others are yielding.

WELLINGTON, March 11—The state conference of the Congregational churches will be held here May 15. Hundreds of delegates from thruout the state will attend.

TELLS RHEUMATICS TO BEGIN ON SALTS

A well-known authority states that stomach trouble and indigestion are nearly always due to acidity—acid stomach—and not as most folks believe, from a lack of digestive juices. He states that an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach retards digestion and starts food fermentation; then our meals sour like garbage in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases, which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. We then get that heavy, lumpy feeling in the chest we eructate sour food, belch gas or have heartburn, flatulence, waterbrash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, while it is effervescing, and furthermore, to continue this for one week. While relief often follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of stomach sufferers with excellent results.

OHIO DRY GOODS DEALERS CONVENE

COLUMBUS, March 11—Displays and a style show with 25 Columbus girls marked the opening of a three-day session here today of the Ohio Retail Dry Goods Association.

David C. Wills, chairman of the Cleveland federal reserve board, made the opening address.

Home Made Remedy Stops Bad Coughs

Get rid of that persistent tough cough before it gets rid of you. Follow this advice and make your own supremely good pleasant-tasting cough mixture that all the family, including the children, can take.

Get from Wimmer Drug Co. or any druggist one ounce of Parmint (double strength)—to this add a little granulated sugar as directed and enough water to make one half pint—that's all there is to it.

With speed almost beyond belief this home made cough mixture stops the toughest hang-on cough, and all because in it there is a substance (too costly for ordinary cough syrups) that immediately covers the membrane like a soothing, healing poultice and blessed relief comes at once.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL OF RESOURCES ASKED IN JOINT MEASURES

WASHINGTON, March 11—Drastic governmental control of all natural resources and creation of a federal super power system were provided in identical bills introduced in the senate and house today.

The senate measure was sponsored by Senator Norris, Republican, of Nebraska, the house bill by Representative Keller, Republican, of Minnesota.

NOTE IS BASIS OF ACTION IN COURT

A petition has been filed in common pleas court by A. C. Nichols vs. Jacob Stotts and Thomas Colopy.

On April 8, 1915, according to the plaintiff's petition, Jacob Stotts made and delivered to Perry Wolfe his promissory note for $323.40.

The plaintiff further states that the note was endorsed by Wolfe and transferred to the plaintiff. He now has the note and there is due to the plaintiff and unpaid the sum of $295.31, it is claimed.

To secure the payment of the note, Stotts executed and delivered to Wolfe his mortgage deed conveying to Wolfe two and one-half acres of land in Franklin-tp.

The plaintiff alleges that the note for $105.71, executed and delivered to Thomas Colopy, one of the defendants, has been fully paid and that Colopy now has no interest in the mortgage.

The plaintiff asks judgement against Jacob Stotts for the sum of $295.31, with interest from Feb. 23, 1924. He also asks a decree for the sale of the land.

R. B. McDermott represents the plaintiff.

SUPPER POSTPONED

The entertainment and supper to have been given by the Farm Women's Club of Perry-tp, at Perry Grange hall, Saturday evening, March 15, has been postponed until Saturday evening, March 29.

IMPORTANT TO ALL WOMEN READERS OF THIS PAPER

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. You can purchase medum and large size bottles at all drug stores.

A Better Way To Treat All Croupy Colds

An External Treatment That Replaces Internal Dosing. Nothing to Swallow—You Just Rub It On.

Today millions of modern mothers treat croup and children's cold troubles by the vapor method.

They use Vicks, the vaporizing salve, because it is externally applied. There's no dosing to upset a delicate little stomach.

When rubbed on over throat and chest Vicks acts like a liniment or plaster. At the same time, the ingredients, released as vapors by the body heat, are inhaled directly into the affected air passages.

For spasmodic croup you rub Vicks well in over throat and chest until the difficult breathing is relieved, then spread on thickly and cover with a warm flannel cloth. An application at bedtime will prevent most night attacks.

Vicks is just as good, of course, for the other cold troubles of children and also for adults.

present at last night's meeting, but was unable to bring them last night.

LIGHTS OBSOLETE

Mr Dolan called attention to the fact that the present lighting system in Coshocton is not in general use thruout the country. He said hat because the lights we now have are obsolete it is difficult to get repair parts for them, and proposed that the city change over to incandescent lights which are being used in nearly all of the surrounding cities

Announcement was made by Mr. Dolan of the moving pictures, showing the many applications of electricity, which will be shown in the Central school auditorium next Thursday night. The council body was invited.

TAXI PARKING

The council Monday night listened to a complaint from John Frew regarding the parking of taxi cabs in front of the Frew building, Main-st. The space on the south side of Main st, between Fifth and Hickory sts, was set aside some time ago by city council as a parking place for cabs. Owing to a recent increase in the number of cabs this space provides insufficient room for all. Mr Frew stated that he believes that legally the cabs have no right to use a part of any street as a station or stable. He asked that the council take steps to prevent the taxis from parking in front of the Frew building, stating that to allow such a practice is detrimental to the interests of the tenants of the building.

His request was referred to the street committee.

The proposal that a light near the Coshocton Glass Company be changed, was referred to the street committee. Councilman J Wesley Clark, in speaking of this proposition, said, "There is no need to make any changes now. The present contract will be renewed soon, and we had beter sidetrack all requests for the present time."

TRACY COMING

Plans were made Monday night to have J. A. Tracy, auditor of state, speak in Coshocton in the near future on the tax situation as it is in municipalities thruout the state. The mayor and city solicitor were appointed to make arrangements.

promotion of morals, said—

"Altho we are not opposed to legitimate business being run on Sunday—street cars, drug stores and such, we feel that the police activity directed against groceries, clothing stores and such will have a good effect. Such places need not run."

Rev. Monsignor John A. Sheppard said he was not taking the slightest interest on either side. "I didn't know we had a blue law drive," he said.

Ransom said that if his motion to the city commission was carried only three things would be legal next Sunday. These he said, were

1—For people either to walk to church or go there by carriage, but not by automobile.

2—Stay home and red the newspapers—newspapers can be printed and vended under the blue law..

3—Get out of the state Saturday night and return Monday.

"If we're going to have blue laws," Ransom declared, "let's have them all the way—just the way they are written on the statute book."

nature and proportions ever held in Coshocton and will doubtless be attended by sportsmen and farmers from all parts of the county. It will be of particular interest to landowners of the county inasmuch as definite plans will be outlined for a constructive program of conservation and protection for the products of Coshocton-co's forest, fields and streams—game, fish, song-birds, livestock, trees and crops.

The co-operation of all farmers of the county is especially solicited. A large percentage of the membership of the Coshocton-co Forest, Field and Stream Protective Association is made up of farmers of the county and it is important that all who can, give the association their support, that the far-reaching aim being mapped out may be in the fullest possible degree realized.

Means of establishing the public state fishing grounds at Mudport Basin, and first steps toward the county-wide varmint hunt to be put on by the protective association this spring, will perhaps be outlined at Wednesday evening's meeting.

WHY MARCH IS MOST DANGEROUS

March is the most dangerous month of the year because the change of season is more than a good many systems can stand. Too often it is true that the sick "last only till spring." But if the system is fortified, if the impurities are driven from the blood, and the nerve tissues fed with wholesome and strength-giving pure food medicine, there is no danger in the change of seasons. Father John's Medicine is invaluable as a tonic in the spring. It strengthens the system and drives out the poisonous waste matter—builds up the body. It is this power that has made it so successful in treating colds and throat troubles. No weakening stimulants, morphine or other dangerous drugs.

BUNNY RABBIT PAYS A VISIT TO HIS COUSIN.

WHENEVER Bunny Rabbit grew discontented with his meadow home and his playmates, his mama would bundle him up in his pretty new grayish-brown suit and send him off to visit some of their relatives. Then when Bunny Rabbit returned he would be perfectly content with the old meadows and the pastures they afforded him.

The day Bunny Rabbit's mama promised to send him to visit his cousins Peter and Paddie Marsh Rabbit, Bunny Rabbit could hardly hop fast enough.

"Gracious!" he exclaimed when at last he reached the marshland and rapped on his cousin's door. "Whoever thought you would like a wet soggy place like this to live in!" It was a soggy and damp hole and Bunny Rabbit, who didn't like to get his gray boots wet, thought it a horrid place in which to live.

"And you say you prefer living in the marshes to the dry meadowlands?" he asked Peter and Paddy Marsh Rabbit who came bouncing out to meet him.

"Certainly we do!" replied Paddie Marsh Rabbit, "I guess we folks and our other cousins Swamp Hare are the only ones of the Rabbit family who do like to live down here in the swamplands. You see we all love to swim, that's why our toes are so long, we can spread them apart—like this." And he showed the astonished Bunny Rabbit just how he swam. "They sort of form paddles which help us in the water."

"I'm Not a Good Swimmer."

"But can you run on land?" asked Bunny Rabbit. "I'm not a good swimmer, but I can get over the ground in a hurry if I'm chased by an enemy. What do you do then?

"Why, we jump into the water if we're near enough and swim. Otherwise, we run," explained Peter Marsh Rabbit. "We run fast, too, let me tell you. We can run faster than Sunny Swamp Hare."

"It's funny—you look smaller than I do and mother said you were larger than we youngsters," mused Bunny Rabbit. "Maybe that's because my hair is bushier than yours. Your hair is just as smooth as can be. I like it."

And Bunny Rabbit rubbed his cousin's soft smooth coat.

"Then if I were you, I'd learn to swim while you are down here," suggested Peter Marsh Rabbit. "I really believe that's what keeps our hair so smooth and glossy."

Bunny Rabbit really did admire his cousins' coats and decided he would learn to swim. So off he went to the edge of the pond and jumped into the water. But he didn't like it at all and finally struggled back to shore and watched his cousins swim.

Mama Marsh Rabbit watched the whole thing and laughed to see the disgusted look on Bunny Rabbit's face. She called them into the house and gave them a dinner which Bunny Rabbit didn't like very much. When it came time for him to start home, he was glad.

"There's no place like home," he told his mama when he reached the meadow. "I wouldn't change places with Peter and Paddie Marsh Rabbit for anything in the world!"

But he ran to find his old playmates and tell them how lucky they all were.

Why Madge's Chauffeur Stopped to Tell His Story.

I WOULD have lacked discernment indeed, if I had failed see the panic which was shaking the driver of the car in which I was on my way to meet Alfred Durkee. That he feared pursuit was evident in the nervous watch he kept upon the traffic and his continual quick glances over his shoulder at the cars behind him. His muttered remark that he hoped the man I was to meet was already at the corner, showed his reluctance to stop his car for any appreciable length of time; and, without knowing the reason for his fear, I took prompt measures to allay it.

"I shall know in an instant if he isn't there," I said, "and in fact I don't think he possibly can have reached here yet, so why not drive around for a few minutes?"

"Good idea," he commented, biting the words short. "Which side of the street is the man?"

"South."

"Then I'll just clip over around Columbus Circle, and back—only way they'll let you turn here, then if he isn't there we'll take another run through the park."

He threaded the mazes of Columbus Circle traffic deftly, and drove slowly along the south side of Fifty-ninth street until I assured him that Alfred was nowhere to be seen. Then he swung his car into the park, and in a few minutes drew to the curb on a part of the road which was higher than the rest of the boulevard. He stopped the car, keeping the engine running, however, and swung himself to the edge of the seat so that he could keep an eye on the cars coming in either direction.

A Wave of Relief.

"Might as well stay here as keep running around in circles," he volunteered, and I guessed that the fear which was obsessing him was loosening his tongue. But I resolved to ask no questions. If I read him aright he would soon tell me the reason for his unmistakable panic.

"Suppose you think it's queer I changed cars," he began tentatively with a side glance at me.

"I suppose you had a good reason for doing so," I returned quietly.

"I'll tell the world I did," he exploded, and then as if ashamed of his outburst, he added quickly, "but don't get uneasy, lady. I'll get you back to Mrs. Bird's all right, even if I have to get somebody else to do it. There's nobody after you. It's me they're gunning for."

A wave of selfish relief swept over me, of which I was ashamed the next second. But I had been so sure his bizarre actions had been caused by the detective or his agents who were trailing the movements of the Harrison children, that I had been nearly panic-stricken myself. It took me several seconds to pull myself together sufficiently to make a sympathetic inquiry of the youth.

"Do you mean you're in any personal danger?" I asked.

"Depends on how good a sleuth is the bird that saw me," he returned, his eyes nervously darting back and forth on the park boulevard. "He's a guy we sent over the road once, and I had to jail around with him and get the goods on him. Of course he thought I double-crossed him, and he swore he'd do me up. I thought he was still up the river—but he's managed to get out, and is driving a taxi—phony papers, I suppose—and I clamped him just as I was turning the corner, after I let you out, and he saw me. . . .

"You Were Brave."

"Luckily he couldn't turn there, had to go all the way around the block, and you can bet by the time he got back to that corner I was blocks away and still going. I headed for a safe garage I knew, dumped the car and pulled this wreck out with a different overcoat and hat. I got a look at his license plate, and spilled it to my pal in the garage. He's in a position to set things going so my old friend will meet some interesting doings in a day or two, but just now that taxi lad is about as wholesome for me as a poisonous snake on my trail would be. Of course he's lost the scent now, but cruising around the way he is, we're likely to run into him anywhere, and I'll be just as glad when we're through this stunt and headed back to the country again."

"You were brave to come back to that corner after me," I said.

"What else would I do?" he demanded, wide-eyed. "That's Mrs. Bird's job. I'd rather meet the other guy in the dark with my hands tied behind me than fall down on a job for her."

His eyes and voice were filled with a loyalty which one would never suspect from his rather unprepossessing exterior. I think he suspected both my admiration and my astonishment, for he scowled, and turning his back upon me, threw in his clutch.

"Guess that guy you're going to meet ought to be on Fifty-ninth by now," he said.

WINIFRED BLACK HEARS ABOUT Brown Dress Suits

A DASHING message it is which comes out of the East and is published in all of the newspapers, a message of moment to the world in these days of artistic and lively sensations.

Man has rebelled, it is said, against the sombre black evening clothes which have so long held him down, and now a few daring ones are appearing in brown evening dress.

Brown, rich, tender, restful brown. It is but a beginning, say the authorities, and we can only guess how long it will be before the dashing beaux go back to the peach colored and blue, mauve and green of the long ago. For there is nothing new under the sun and especially in fashion. Every fashion goes back to some point in the past, men's fashions as well as women's.

A Relief from Black

Brown is the color now and we may expect to see the cautious fashion writers advising the watchful heroes of the day just what shadows will best suit the brunette, the blonde, or the neutral gentleman, and how the different colors from golden brown to the nut brown shades may best be utilized.

It will be a relief to get away from the everlasting black of dress clothes, but there is danger in freedom, let me tell you, devotees of dress in the masculine ranks. Be discreet or there will be trouble.

My friend Alice says she fears for the gentler sex when she reads of the coming glories of masculine raiment. "Girls are prone to fall in love with the black clad dancers of the evening's revels, but what will happen when Adonis is dressed in colors suitable to his style of beauty and when every partner for the dance has a toilet which demands a compliment?"

The girls will have to steel their hearts when the new revel of color gets under way.

From England comes the story of a crusade to bring to America English tea-drinking habits. It is all for the benefit of the India tea growers and the determination is to break down the alleged American coffee fetish and bring about for every day the delightful English tea table and all it means.

Coffee will hold its own here in America, we may be sure, but there is room for the delights of the English tea. In London all business and pleasure stops at four o'clock for the daily tea. At the law office, the dentists, even, there is a pause while the tea is brought in, and at homes and in hotels, the daily tea is an event as certain as sunrise or sunset.

A Wholesome Habit

A wholesome habit it is, the stopping of work and everything else, the quiet lounging for a half hour over the tea table which can be made delightful with all sorts of cakes and dainties and the little respite is full of good effects.

We are too anxious and hurried here in America; it would be good for us to take up the English fashion of afternoon tea with its perfect ease, its friendly atmosphere and all of its abhorrance of formality.

Possibly we shall live to see our belles and beaux gathered round the afternoon tea table in radient garbs, each rivalling the other, in browns, blues and peach color.

Diary of a Fashion Model

Gaby Decides on a Figured Black and White Cotton Frock.

"THERE are so many cunning frocks this season, that I should think anybody who could sew at all would soon accumulate a whole wardrobe," Pam remarked this morning.

"Yes," I agreed. "It seems to me that the new season frocks are simpler and lovelier than they ever were."

"I hadn't thought much about sewing till I went with Gaby to buy some material this morning," Pam said.

She mentioned the name of a store that is noted for its beautiful wash materials. "They have Spring and Summer fabrics that would just make your mouth water," Pam declared to me.

"It's always a pleasure to go in there and walk about, even when one isn't planning to buy anything," I said.

"They have a way of casually piling up bolts of heavenly material at the end of the counter," Pam said. "It makes the passer-by stop to admire and stay to buy."

"What did you stay to buy today?" I asked.

"Only some figured cotton," Pam answered.

"Let's have a look," I said in a commanding tone.

"It's very stunning, I think," Pam declared as she brought a small, flat package toward me.

"There can't be much material if the bundle is no bigger than that," I observed.

"There isn't," Pam replied. "But wait till I tell you how I'm going to make it and you'll understand why I didn't need any more."

By this time, she had unfolded a length of white cotton, on which a delicate leaf design was traced in black.

"Perfectly stunning!" I exclaimed.

"Wait," Pam commanded. She began hastily turning the pages of a sketch-book she keeps always handy.

"What do you think of this?" she asked.

She held the book toward me and I saw a sketch of one of the smartest frocks I've seen for a long time. It was also one of the simplest.

"I can't understand how it can be so attractive when there is so little to it," I told her.

"Its utter simplicity is delightful, I think," said Pam. "These bands will be of white organdie, of course."

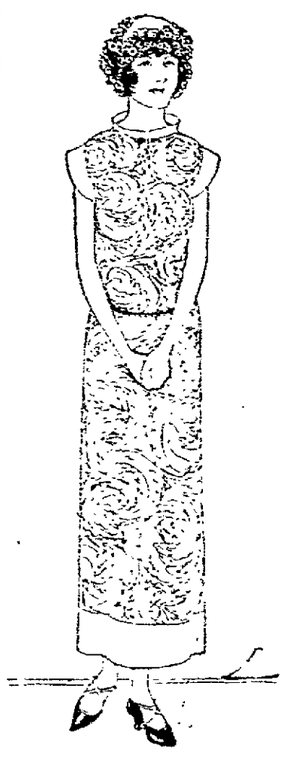

"The little Chinese collar is lovely," I told her.

"I'm going to hold mine together at the front with two tiny black buttons, and the belt is to be of twisted black leather," she told me.

"I may make one, myself," I threatened.

"Why don't you?" Pam urged. "They have printed cotton in the loveliest color blends I ever hope to see."

So it happened that when Pam cut out her frock, I cut one of yellow and tomato and blue.

The Bands of White Organdie and the Chinese Collar Give This Frock Its "Chic."

HOME-MAKING HELPS

"Everything About the House Helps to Make the Home"

By WANDA BARTON

Some Novel Lamp Shades for the Home.

THE fashioning of lamp shades has become a fine art. The many craftsmen who are doing novel things along this line have spurred the manufacturers to greater efforts so that there are shades or all manner of lamps in all shapes, sizes and materials to suit the pocketbooks of all purchasers. In all the shops where materials are sold classes are taught to make fancy silk and other shades, and wire frames are to be had in almost any shape desired.

There are a few laws to be observed in shade-making. One important point is choosing a frame that fits the particular lamp. The frame should also be appropriate to the place in which it is to stand. Another law is to use materials for the shade that are harmonious with the color scheme and style of furniture of the room where the lamp is to be used. Also, there is a fine distinction made between materials for a bedroom shade and those for a living-room, dining-room or hall.

Odd little shades for lamps used in sun parlors, living-rooms and upstairs are made of glazed chintz in gay colorings. These shades are plaited, which makes them look almost like paper. Bases for the lamps are made of old-fashioned glass lamps, Chinese ginger jars, pottery jugs of various kinds and old pottery pickle jars in gray with the blue figures—the kind that we may remember seeing on swinging shelves in the old-fashioned cellars of our grandmothers' time.

Then come parchment shades, plain and trimmed, painted and stencilled, which are good looking, wear well, and if made at home are reasonable in price. Some are painted with a band of color at the top and bottom, edged with a cut line. These are used in round or oblong models, or shaped like a guitar for hall use. A flat drum shaped shade is also attractive and good for hall use, as it takes but little space. Of course, the electrifying of all lamps makes the closed shade possible and safe. The pulls may be long enough to turn the current on and off without disturbing the shade itself. The shade with a frame of ruffled or embroidered silk and a lace veil finished with colored silk or gold tassels requires a closed top to carry out the design.

Wooden bases are rather new for lamps and are painted to match the bedroom furniture. The shades for these lamps are sometimes made of wallpaper like that used on the walls of the room or of dainty calico trimmed with antique lace motifs, which in many cases are dyed to match the coloring of the materials of which the shade is made.

Brown craft paper shades decorated in colorful polychrome fashion are popular for dining-room and library use. The bases are usually of wood, also decorated in polychrome designs. Getting away from the old round shades is rather a relief, for it gives one the pleasure of being original in her shade selections.

Glass lamps have been revived and electrified. They are quaint and pretty, especially in old-fashioned rooms. Many of us, however, are not far enough removed from the day when they had to be filled and trimmed daily to remember them pleasantly. Flower-shaped silk shades for small bedroom lamps are quaint and not hard to make. Each panel or petal is made separately, then slipped into the frame, which is of painted wood or willow.

The old-fashioned, fussy, crepe-paper shades are not made in the old style, as they were dust-catchers and not as practical as the newer straight shades made of artcraft papers. One advantage of the paper shade is that we can afford new ones frequently, especially if we have learned how to make them ourselves.

Where curtains are made for a bedroom in checked gingham the lamp shades should be made to match. In order to make the material hold a paper or parchment foundation is used and the gingham covering is plaited with it.

YOUR HEALTH

We Only Show Ignorance If We Joke About Disease

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. COPELAND

I HAVE long observed how common it is to joke over sickness or bodily infirmity. Of course there are defects due to accidents or to congenital causes. We are not apt to speak of them. But frequently we hear it said: "I have the rheumatism so I can hardly walk. I am like a worn out old dray horse."

Another will say, "I nearly sneeze my head off every morning, I am worse than an ancient locomotive getting up steam."

Every day you hear somebody declare, "I ache all over. I have no more life than a block of wood."

All these statements are confessions of weakness which a proud man should hate to admit. How often do you hear any one brag about the number of broken window panes he has in his house? Do you hear any boasting about the broken down fences on the farm, or the weed-choked potato field?

To me ill health is not a thing to laugh over or to joke about. Just as sure as can be, the time will come when you will be ashamed to say you have a cold.

The next time you have a cold, figure out for yourself why you have it. You will find several factors.

For two or three nights you stayed out till past midnight. Because of loss of sleep you felt tired and cross.

You have abused your strength, suffering indigestion because of over-eating, or taking food which always disagrees with you. Honestly, did you not show lack of character by failure to resist the temptation of a much liked dish of some sort?

Perhaps you permitted yourself to remain for hours in a poorly ventilated or smoke filled theatre or restaurant. Or the place may have been cold and draughty. You stayed till you were chilled to the bone.

You may have suffered the torments of worry, with its loss of appetite and loss of sleep. You have given way to the fear of disaster. Lack of faith in yourself and in humanity is responsible for the lowered resistance which permitted infection.

If germs alone were the cause of illness, not one of us would be free from sickness from infancy to death. Germs are with us always. They do not exactly clutter up our breathing apparatus, but they are mixed with the secretions of nose and throat. Hardly a moment exists but our secretions are contaminated with these agencies of disease.

Just as we lock our windows and doors against thieves, so we lock the door of admission to our tissues. Health and vigor are the locks which control these avenues of entrance.

When we abuse the body in one of the ways I have suggested the power of resistance is lowered and the body is not guarded as it should be. As a result the watchful germs, awaiting their chance, rush in to begin their attack upon the organs and structures of the body.

No one would boast of sleeping on guard or of neglecting the property he is under obligation to protect. Why joke about the effects of neglecting your body?

You see now why I believe the time will come when we will feel ashamed to admit we have one of many illnesses which result because we have failed in our duties to ourselves. Right living and common sense will spare us the loss of time and the lack of efficiency which comes from carlessness or self-indulgence.

HEROINES OF HISTORY

Significant Incidents in the Lives of Famous Women

By MARK STUYVESANT

The Brave Girl Who Helped Bonnie Prince Charlie.

IN 1745 during the rebellion in Scotland when the Pretender Charles Edward was rising in favor, he was at one time in great peril and it was a woman who saved him. This is the way it happened.

After the battle of Culloden, the Prince was in hiding in the mountains of Rosshire. From there he sought refuge on the Island of South Uist with the Laird McDonald.

But it was necessary for him to escape from this very dangerous place.

It was Flora, the daughter of a lesser laird by the same name, Captain McDonald, of Armadale of the Isle of Skye, who helped him.

In company with an officer, Flora McDonald went to a dark cavern where the Prince was in hiding. With her she took a dress for him to wear and a passport for herself and a serving-woman whom she called "Betsy Burke."

At nightfall they embarked in a small boat from Uist for the Isle of Skye, but encountered such storms that the boat was almost capsized. But Flora never once lost her courage—not even when they were fired on by a company of soldiers on the Isle of Skye and were forced to change their course and land in another part of the island.

Finally Flora arranged for the Prince to embark for the Isle of Raarsay, but Flora went to the Tower of London charged with treason to await trial for her life.

After a time, it was through the aid of the heir-apparent that Flora was released—for she had no particular political or religious convictions. What she had done was merely to help one in distress.

From that time she was received at court and was the intimate friend of the aristocracy of England. But after four years Flora returned to Scotland, where she married Allen McDonald.

Awaiting Trial for Her Life.

In 1775, on account of financial difficulties, the McDonalds removed to South Carolina, which was then a refuge for Scottish refugees.

But peace was not to be found here, for the following year Flora found herself once more in the storm of war and true to her country she supported her king as she had loyally aided her Prince.

Captain McDonald was taken prisoner by the Americans after the battle of Moore's creek and once more Flora found herself a fugitive. Her house was pillaged and her plantation ruined.

Immediately after Captain McDonald's release, he with Flora and their family sailed for England. During the voyage they encountered a French sloop which gave battle. The brave Flora stood on the quarter deck and encouraged the sailors.

However, the latter years of her life were quiet and happy ones and when she was laid to rest wrapped in a shroud made of the sheets in which the Prince had slept, over three thousand people followed her bier to the little cemetery on the Isle of Skye, where she is still worshipped as a real heroine.

News From the Training Camp

WINTERHAVEN, Fla., March 11—Bib Faik has taken unkindly to the decision to give him a fling at pitching instead of outfielding. He says he won't pitch. Johnny Evers has been given the decision as to availability of White Sox recruits.

AVALON, Catalina Island, Cal., March 11—Examination has proved that nothing is wrong with Vic Keen's arm and its stiffness is passing. Bill Killifer, Cub manager, was cheered by the report.

TAMPA, Fla., March 11—Misfortune has robbed little "Chick" Gagnon, former Holy Cross star of his opportunity to land a regular berth in the majors. He probably will be one of the first rookies cut off by the Nationals as a result of an injury to an old football knee.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 11—Having been frozen out of the first scheduled game of the year, yesterday, the game is on for today between the Regulars and Yannigans. The Tiger squad is entirely complete with the arrival of Kenneth Holloway, pitcher, making a total of 37 players.

PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 11—The Pirates out of respect for Pat Moran whose funeral is today, will cease all activities in training. Most of them will go for an automobile ride as guests of Paso Robles citizens.

LEESBURG, Fla., March 11—Manager Fletcher divided his squad of Phillies into two groups today—one composed of Regulars and the others of Rookies. The Rookies will be given the exercise from now on. Cy Williams was on the lot today.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 11—The sunny south stuff drew hoarse laughs from the Athletics with the appearance of snow. Bad weather has kept workouts light. A number of Mackmen are down with colds.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 11—It was announced at the start of practice by Miller Huggins today that Babe Ruth would be allowed to work out for a few minutes with the rest of the Yankees late this afternoon. Ruth is convalescing from a recent attack of influenza and weighs 218 pounds, his lowest figure at this time in many years.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, March 11—The first cut in the Boston Red Sox training list came today when Manager Fohl released five rookies. They were Strap, Schillings, Mazey, Ryan and Turner.

LAKELAND, Fla., March 11—Stan Coveleskie, Sherrod Smith and George Uhle, veteran pitchers on the Cleveland staff, are rounding into shape. Manager Speaker will begin weeding out the "impossibles" from the eighteen-man pitching staff at the training camp within a day or so.

Last Night's Bouts

Status Of War Debts

THREE years were provided by congress in which a world war foreign debt commission was to arrange for settlement of obligations to the United States. The period is two-thirds gone, and Great Britain, Finland and Cuba are the only countries that have made an adjustment, the first two thru refunding operations and the latter by payment.

Sixteen countries remain on the list, of which France and Italy are the largest debtors, France owing more than $3,844,000,000 and Italy more than $1,932,000,000. The total remaining, for which no arrangement to pay has been made, amounts to about $7,000,000,000. Not all nations are in a position to begin payments immediately, but there appears to be no reason why they can not arrange for funding their debts.

President Coolidge stated the attitude of this government correctly when he said in a message to congress that "our country would not wish to assume the role of oppressive creditor, but would maintain the principle that financial obligations between nations are likewise moral obligations which international faith and honor require should be discharged. A few days ago Jugo-Slavia sent Milarod Nidelkovitch to the United States as a special commissioner to confer with Secretary Mellon about its debt of $40,000,000. There is no way of knowing how correct he may be in defining the policy of other governments, but when he says "France and Italy, which owe the United States large sums, do not want the smaller countries to set a precedent in the payment of war debts," he centers attention on their continued procrastination.

While the delicacy of the task is evident, both for creditor and debtors, it is time drifting were ended. Otherwise the life of the debt commission will have to be extended, not in itself such a serious matter, but a reflection of a condition of affairs that is a drag on world commerce and industry. Italy's economic recovery in the last two years has put it in a position to begin action toward an adjustment, and France at no time has been justified in making debt payments contingent on reparation payments by Germany.

France has since the end of the war found it possible to lend considerable sums to some of the smaller countries in Europe for political and industrial purposes.

A Drifting Congress

DISTRACTED by the oil scandal, Congress simply cannot force itself to get down to work. The appropriation bills are dragging; committee work is all but at a standstill; in the Senate only one supply measure has been passed, and the record shows not a single other piece of legislation of importance enacted.

The House finally has passed its hybrid tax bill. Not in years has such a laggard spirit been shown in the session preceding the national conventions; it is due to the fact that Congress is leaderless and to the benumbing effect of the oil inquiry. For weeks the Senate has done little save to discuss Doheny, Sinclair, Fall, Denby, Daugherty et al.

It now begins to appear that Congress will have to recess over the period of conventions and to resume shortly thereafter for the completion of its work. Senator Warren is entirely right in issuing a frank warning along these lines. Three months have passed with almost a complete zero of accomplishment; three months remain in which the routine grist of the money bills, the tax measure, certain to force a prolonged debate in the Senate, and the scores of measures now being incubated must be disposed of. The myriad of investigations will have their repercussion in debate, with all forces jockeying ruthlessly for political advantage.

The progressive-radical bloc has not yet begun to fire its ammunition: Senator La Follette has very definite ideas on the subject of legislation making petroleum a public utility after the Teapot Dome inquiry has been completed. And there is no method by which the end of this most celebrated of investigations can be foretold. No sooner does the drilling in one field of inquiry seem unproductive than oil begins to gush forth in another field.

There are certain dangers involved in the prospect that Congress may reconvene after the national conventions have been held and Presidential candidates nominated. Innumerable speeches made for political purposes only; legislation proposed for partisan advantage in the campaign; a flood of irresponsible stump talk, and general demoralization. If Congress reconvenes there is no certainty as to when it will be able to adjourn, despite the natural anxiety of most of its members to return to their home bailiwicks to repair their fences.

Out of such a spectacle of demoralization naturally will come a public reaction against the conditions which have been brot about by the emergence of a balance-of-power group, a bloc strong enough to destroy leadership and to levy tribute on both parties. Our parliamentary system seems to be entirely unadapted to the existence of such a third element in Congress. Of course, a really responsible statesmanship would find a way of achieving leadership by reaching a coalition with this element on legislation where compromise was possible; but the present Republican leadership, lapsing into indifference and disgust, is interested neither in a solution of its troubles nor in a modus vivendi by which Congress can adjust itself to the new conditions in the future.

Whatever else the impending election does, it will make a reform of prevailing procedure in Congress imperative.

A child can spread scandal as fast as a woman.

If there is the clatter of a dish the leader will stop, scowl and perhaps walk out in a pet. He is master of his bow. He has the heart of the Nomad and the gift of true artistry. One enthusiastic diner tossed him a twenty dollar bill, following a solo.

He picked it up, tossed it back and in broken English cried "Bah, I care not for money!" Somehow, you believe him. The proprietor flutters about him much in the manner of an opera manager with his temperamental prima donna. He does not know at what moment he will decide to walk out.

On the wall was a placard announcing that the humble second violinist was to appear in a recital at Aeolian Hall in a few days. In the audience was a long raven haired man who was dragged to the piano. He played to thunderous applause—an artist. Even the churlish leader beamed his approval.

One morning I stood in front of Buckingham Palace as the king went in his carriage. A man from Chicago who was with me exclaimed "He looks like my professor of English at college."

Homer Croy has departed for southern France, where he will remain a year to finish his second novel—following the success of his first, written anonymously. It is to be a realistic novel of farm life—not the life of back-breaking drudgery, but the modern era of radio and flivver. Croy has not allowed the success of "West of the Water Tower" to turn his head. He wrote 10,000 words of the second novel and tore it up. He began again and wrote 60,000 words. In his third effort he wrote 30,000 words. This passed his critical censorship and so he has gone to France to finish it up. He has realized the lesson few novelists heed. Just as one swallow does not make a summer, so it is one successful novel does not make for lasting literary success.

A gentleman with a hectic hang-over dropped into a Broadway restaurant and sat at the marble-topped table with his head cupped in his hands. A colored waiter approached.

"What can I do for you, suh?"

"Well, George, I'm feeling pretty rocky. You can give me two soft boiled eggs and a few kind words."

Soon the waiter returned and placing the eggs on the table said: "Here's part of your order, and here's the rest—don't eat 'em."

WALT MASON

THE SCOFFLAW

The scofflaw took his morning drink of dark and deadly rum, and said in bitter tones, "I think the last disgrace has come, for, called a scofflaw, strike me pink, I shudder and succumb. I've emptied many a jug and vat, and faced men unafraid, but when a faked-up word like that is on my person laid, I sit me down upon my hat, and call for lemonade. They've called me soak and bitters-hound, they've called me vag and bum, such raw and ribald names abound for those who lap up rum, and still upon my bootleg round the dealers saw me come. They've called me every beastly name the lexicons provide, but I have had small sense of shame, have been held some pride, but I must quit my sinful game when 'scofflaw' is applied. I have the true musician's ear that discords shock and bruise, altho it has been dulled by beer and bootleg brands of booze; and 'scofflaw' fills my soul with fear, and jars me to my shoes. It is a harsh, discordant word, that flouts descriptive pens and it recalls, whenever heard, the song of guinea hens, or that less famous jackassbird that haunts the jungle fens. So I must quit my evil course and cut out gin and beer, and strive to be a driving force of righteousness. It's clear, lest some one, in a whisper hoarse, says 'Scofflaw' in my ear."

PEOPLES' FORUM

TIME TO CALL A HALT

Editor The Tribune.

Not until it leaked out some weeks ago that an innocent looking "private wire" had been hastily erected between the whitehouse and Mr. E. B. McLean's residence did the writer after his usual belated manner realize that this Teapot Dome oil affair was going too far.

The publication of a slight fraction of the "stuff" passing over this wire emphasizes the high esteem in which this gentleman of $100,000 check fame is held by Mr. Coolidge and the tender solicitude of the Chief Magistrate of the Nation for the wife of this Big Check Artist.

Surely the dullest politicians in Congress realize by now that this Oil Investigation has got beyond control and must be stopped or brot within decent limits. Surely those who stirred it up, intended no more than a perfunctory affair,—just a diversion to relieve the monotony of winter or perchance, to further somebody's chance for the presidency.

But it has got away; and while the most searching investigation possible might not reveal a tenth part of the incapacity and corruption in official circles, the infinitesimal part now exposed to the view of the vulgar has well nigh ruined the political fortunes of some promising candidates. The strongest candidate among the Democrats seem to have definitely passed under the clouds. The treacherous oily waves have for weeks been lapping at the front porch of the whitehouse with no hope of abatement. The president himself, up to a month ago the only candidate considered by the Republicans and whose nomination and triumphant election next November seemed assured, is now hopelessly enmeshed and he is daily becoming a greater liability to his party.

It is high time that this investigation be stopped, else there will be no one left with sufficient reputation to run for president. Who will be the hero that will stop it before such dire calamity results?

OPERATION ADVISED FRIEND SAID "DON'T DO IT!"

Try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound First. Proved Good Advice.

Chicago, Illinois.—"Just a few lines to let you know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was married going on for three years, and went to a doctor and was taking treatments twice a week for pains every month. I used to lie in bed three or four days with them and the doctor would call and inject something into my arm to put me asleep so I would not feel the pains. At last she said I would have to be operated on if I wanted any children. Well, I just happened to go to see a friend with her first baby and I told her I was going to the hospital, and she said, 'Don't do it! You go and get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and you won't need any operation.' So my husband got me a bottle right away. Now I have two lovely children. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to every woman. It has helped me and a lot of my friends."—Mrs. A. McANDLESS, 1709 South Morgan St., Chicago, Illinois.
